A highlight of the culinary calendar; each year we are blown away by the world-class talent in the room and the generosity towards a cause that is so deserving."

A concept created by chef Peter Gordon in 1998, the annual 'Who's Cooking Dinner?' evening is one of the city's most celebrated dining occasions. Upon arrival, guests are assigned to their coveted chef's table by random draw. Within one room a variety of cuisine, skill and talent will be on show as some of the UK's most esteemed chefs serve exclusive, unique menus, paired with wines expertly matched by each restaurant's sommelier. Following dinner guests are invited to bid generously in what would normally be a money-can't-buy experience of having the chefs cook in their own home.
